

Kate Hills

Founder, Make It British.

With a background in working for several large brands and retailers in design and buying roles, she gave up her corporate career to set up Make it British as a way of supporting UK manufacturers and those companies that wanted to make in the UK.

She founded Make it British in 2011 as a platform to promote UK-made brands and manufacturers and to raise awareness of all of the fantastic manufacturing that still takes place in Britain.

Make it British is now a membership organisation, representing over 500 businesses that make in the UK, and Kate also offers coaching to creative small business owners that want to grow their UK-made brands.
